“ It is vitally important to us as a design team to bring energy and life into our client’s homes to fit their lifestyle, whilst reflecting the personality of our work, and that goes hand in hand with creating great design.”

~ Harriet Treitz, HCT Design Studio

Our History

Long time friends and comrades, Harriet Cochran Treitz and Suzanne Wallace Whayne cultivated their friendship working together on many charity events, and interacting socially in Louisville, Kentucky. These kindred souls first shared their love of interior design as in this realm of charitable giving, and design and fabric shows. Then, after traveling the world to acquire eclectic pieces for clients and their personal collections, the friends then decided to embark on a journey of an interior design firm, namely, Treitz & Whayne Interior Design.

This dynamic team brings a level of savvy, life, knowledge and savoir faire to any design project. Whether their customer is looking for a classic and austere interior, a fun family farm house or a chic modern penthouse look, the studio is adept to handle any wish for their clientele.

Harriet Cochran Treitz

Harriet Cochran Treitz is a dynamic interior designer who was literally born into her trade, possessing years of experience and a natural given talent to create gorgeous spaces.

It's all about color when the room or project is completed. Giving 110% to define the complete look that lasts for years beyond its time. There is nothing new under the sun; only refocused or directed. It is always your look, with my mark."

- Harriet Treitz

Harriet Cochran Treitz is a Louisville Kentucky native with deep roots in classic design, art, architecture and craftsmanship. Her familial history lends to her work, as it is her given talent.

Coming from a family with southern roots, her Grandmother's life was used as a model in the book series "The Little Colonel" by Annie Fellows Johnston. Based on the lives of Hattie Cochran Dick, and her grandfather, George Washington Weissinger, who was in fact, a Confederate colonel.

Harriet's colorful familial past and eccentric tree lends to her unique design capabilities. Mrs. Treitz was literally born into design, as her Mother, Mary Tyler "Ming" Dick, was an esteemed interior designer and possessed an artistic background spanning all mediums of the arts. Mary Tyler ("Ming") Dick was the art chairman of the Junior League and formed the Louisville Children's Theatre. Her Father, Albert was an architect and developed much of the city of St. Matthews, Kentucky.

Her talents were a birthright as she was always surrounded with color, art and architecture. She has honed her talents as a designer with the Louisville firm of Bittner's , and then proceeding to help build the entity of the Lee W. Robinson Company for nearly a decade.

Her works have spanned from a modern chic penthouse apartment in an city setting with fabulous views, to ever classic traditional homes and living spaces of all genres in between. She boasts a vast history with hands on creation of interiors full of life, energy and the client's needs and wishes.

Harriet Cochran Treitz embodies all that is important to create wonderful living spaces for any lifestyle.

Suzanne Wallace Whyne brings her love of the arts full circle with the creation of “Suzanne Wallace Whyne Interior Design”

From childhood, Suzanne has been a natural at cultivating her talents across all mediums of the arts. A Louisville, Kentucky native, Suzanne was born to live and breathe the arts, and attended the Youth Performing Arts School. From there, she received a musical theatre scholarship, which took her Los Angeles. She loved the arts scene and embraced the LA spirit, singing and performing with numerous productions and artists. Her creative talents took her bicoastal between LA and then New York. In between her jet setting, she would visit family at home, and on one trip, met her Louisvillian husband.

Living and working in both major cities, Suzanne’s artistic talents came even more to life as she created lovingly splendid homes for her family and friends alike. Through bicoastal living and her life journey she has traveled extensively, thus her eye for design and creating eclectic spaces has flourished.

Whether she was working on a penthouse in the bustling NYC scene or a coastal retreat in California, Mrs. Whyne has developed and international flair pulling inspiration from the uniquely different living environments she has encountered. And continues to embrace with many projects that add to the vast range of her work.

Her portfolio boasts interiors that match many facets of what design is all about, but in a unique way. The dynamic vision carries through with a recipe of masculine and feminine fusion, coupled with a respect for the space at hand. The balance lies also with a mix of modern, transition, midcentury to classic or Victorian, any genre is not out of reach for this esteemed talent in her trade.

Suzanne Wallace Whyne is creating an interior design world that has such diverse works, she is and will be a force to be reckoned with as she emerges on the scene with passion and talent.

Suzanne Wallace Whyne
